About the music

When Haydn returned to Vienna from London in August 1795, he took with him an English libretto entitled The Creation of the World, prepared some 50 years earlier and based on the Book of Genesis, Milton's Paradise Lost, and the Psalms. The author is unknown, but it is fairly certain the text had been intended for Handel. This alone gave it particular appeal to Haydn, who had been enthralled by Handel's mastery of the dramatic choruses, vivid orchestration and expressive arias of the 'English' oratorio. Haydn arranged for a German translation, and immediately set about composing his own oratorio, The Creation, which received its first public performance on 19 March 1799 to overwhelming acclaim. It remains one of the most popular of all oratorios.

Musical Director Neil Taylor will be guiding us through this choral 'Big Bang' with his usual interpretative insight and invaluable vocal tips, whilst accompanist Pete Durrant will (also as usual) be representing chaos. Our soloists this year are all members of Manchester-based ensemble, The Turton Consort, and featuring SGS' new Assistant MD, Robert Brooks.
